

「The Kobe Declaration」

The 66th Annual Meeting of the Japanese Society for Neurochemistry

The Society experienced its first joint convention with the Japanese Society for Neuropathology, and the members of the Society have once again recognized the significance of the existence of the Japan Society for Neurochemistry (JSN). What distinguishes our society is “Molecules and Disease”. Now is the time for us to gather our wisdom to answer the founding propositions of the society: Why do molecular abnormalities cause disease, and how can molecular targeting lead to disease treatment?

This is not a matter of blind obedience to our predecessors. We must record what our predecessors thought and what they were passionate about to solve, and we must work as an academic society to open up new horizons for the eradication of neurological and psychiatric diseases. We will contribute to the conquest of neurological and psychiatric diseases through the inheritance and strengthening of tradition.
